Summary

My passion for making things happen always pushes me to strive for the best possible results that best matches the end-users' needs. With a customer-facing role and cross-functional collaboration skills, I communicate easily with non-technical clients while still capturing the technical nuances of the requirements for developers. With the drive to make things even better, I've worked through the full product life cycle, from market analysis to product roll-out, to improve processes and deliver more efficient results.
